

Make the hunt your own

Help your child notice letters and beginning sounds through a short, playful hunt. No book purchase is needed.

Before you begin

Print puzzle pages 2-4 on US Letter paper at actual size. Bring a pencil or crayons. Stay with your child and point instead of moving items. Leave lamps, cords, doors, windows, hot drinks, and fragile items untouched.

As you search

Say the letter name, then the word and its beginning sound: "T, towel, /t/." Ask your child to point, check, or draw. Accept scribbles and spoken answers. If an item is missing, use a picture or choose another word with the same beginning sound.

Adjust for your child

For a younger learner, try two letters and offer two choices. For a child who is ready, hide the word with your hand and ask them to name a treasure. Keep the activity short and stop when interest fades. Praise effort and curiosity.

Talk together

1. Which treasure was easiest to find? What helped you?
2. What could you do if a friend needed help finding a treasure?
3. Why should we ask before taking something that belongs to someone else?

After reading the story

If you have The Alphabet Treasure Hunt by B N Morrison, ask your child to choose a letter from the story and find another example at home. Talk about helping friends, being patient, and taking care of shared spaces.
